Warehouse Line of Credit Extended By Others

General

- Correspondents may borrow money to fund the origination of mortgage loans from a warehouse lender of their choice.
- Loans funded by the correspondent lenders' corporate or personal funds and/or lines of credit not obtained through a warehouse lender are not eligible for sale to Truist.
- Truist requires bailee letters be submitted with the original Note from warehouse lenders for all closed loans.

Note: Correspondent lenders, who are financial institutions (banks, savings and loans, credit unions) or who are wholly owned subsidiaries of a financial institution, are NOT required to attach bailee letters to the original Note. However, these "exempt" lenders must provide correct wiring instructions using either the Truist Wire Authorization form (COR 0004) or a similar form, provided the same information is made available to Truist.

- Truist has the option to decline to purchase mortgage loans funded through any loan or line of credit which creates additional risk or unreasonable workload in connection with purchasing a mortgage loan
- Examples of line of credit requirements that would cause Truist to decline to purchase mortgage loans are:
 - The warehouse lender requires Truist to transmit the purchase proceeds before releasing the note.
 - The warehouse lender will not release its security interest in the mortgage loan or note upon transmittal of the purchase proceeds.
 - The warehouse lender requires Truist to enter into agreements other than a typical collateral bailee agreement.

Redemption Rights of the Delinquent Borrower

General

- A delinquent borrower who has had real property sold at a foreclosure sale has one year from and after the sale date to redeem the real property from the purchaser of the real property at the foreclosure sale.
- It is possible for the delinquent borrower to redeem the real property by paying the purchaser the amount paid for the real property at the foreclosure sale.
- Until the one year redemption period has expired, the title company for the new purchaser will include an exception on the final title policy for the redemption right of the delinquent borrower. This is reflected in the final title policy as an exception.
- Truist will not purchase loans where the final title policy has taken exception to a “Redemption Right of the Delinquent Borrower.”
